

A WORD FROM THE CENTER

We've settled into our new home in BKC and as promised, the American Center has started once again to bring you great programming. The highlight of January was our comedy show "Make Chai Not War" at the Y.B. Chavan Center on January 18. The show, featuring three Indian-American comedians, drew a packed house and had the audience rolling in the aisles. I hope that you had a chance to make it! We also restarted our Saturday film screenings with classic American comedies. And on Monday, January 23, we hosted the first "Mumbai Mondays" program in BKC. We're thrilled that so many of you joined us for these programs.

More is coming your way in February! The American Center is bringing Guinness World Record holding 3D chalk artist Tracy Lee Stum to the Kala Ghoda Arts Festival. Come and witness her amazing 3D street art come to life on Rampart Row on February 8 and 9. Saturday film screenings continue in February with an exciting selection of films honoring African-American History Month.

In March, the American Center is hosting the Bad Boys of Dance for a performance in Mumbai on March 13. Save the date!

We're also gearing up our Elections-related programming for the 2012 U.S. Presidential elections. If your school or organization wants to know more about U.S. elections or want to host a Consulate speaker on the subject, please let us know by sending an email to mumbaipublicaffairs@state.gov.

African American Writers and Classical Tradition by William W. Cook and James Tatum. The University of Chicago Press, Chicago, 2010

In this book the authors argue that African American literature did not develop apart from canonical Western literary traditions but instead grew out of those literatures, even as it adapted and transformed the cultural traditions and religions of African and the African diaspora along the way. Tracing interaction between African American writers and the literatures of ancient Greece and Rome, from the time of slavery and its aftermath to the civil rights era through the present, the authors offer a discussion of the life and work of Phillis Wheatley, Frederick Douglas, Ralph Ellison, and Rita Dove, among other acclaimed writers.
